SKETCH OF THE SAMUEL BUCK FAMILY.

CONCERNING the ancestors of Samuel Buck, we are unable to get satisfactory account, as to records of names, births, marriages and dates, as clear as we would like. Some we shall have to get at by circumstances. We have supposed we belong to the family of Emanuel Buck, who was born 1623, settled in Weathersfield, Ct., and married Sarah —, by whom he had EZEKIEL, b. Jan. 15, 1650.

JOHN, b. Nov. 30, 1650.

JONATHAN, b. April 8, 1655.

His second wife was Mary Kirby, daughter of John Kirby, of Hartford, Ct.; born 1637, married April 17, 1658, died Jan. 17, 1712. We find that John Kirby lived in Middletown, in 1670, and died 1671. Children of Emanuel and Mary :

MARY, b. April 1, 1659.

DAVID, b. April 3, 1667.

SARAH, b. April 1, 1669.

ELIZABETH, b. June 4, 1676.

THOMAS, b. June 10, 1678.

ABIGAIL, b. Aug. 1, 1682.

EZEKIEL BUCK, born June 15, 1650, son of Emanuel and

Sarah; married Rachel, daughter of John Andrews. Died May 3, 1713. Their children were:

IN THE RECORDS AT HARTFORD.

Thomas Buck (of Weathersfield) married Deborah Hews (supposed of Guilford), Oct. 10, 1665, who had a son Thomas. In the church records at Middletown, we find that Thomas Buck and his wife Susannah, were admitted to full communion Nov. 15, 1702. They had a daughter Mary, who was admitted to full membership Nov. 15, 1715. Benjamin, son of Thomas and Susannah, had a daughter baptized Nov. 17, 1717. We find no record of the death of Susannah, wife of Thomas Buck, in the church records, but find that Thomas Buck and Sarah Judd, of Hartford (formerly of Farmington), were joined in marriage covenant May 12, 1709. Sarah, daughter of Thomas and Sarah his wife, born June 10, 1710; Thomas, son of Thomas and Sarah his wife, born Feb. 6, 1712; Mary, daughter of Thomas and Sarah his wife, born Nov. 11, 1715; Ebenezer, son of Thomas Buck and Sarah his wife, born Nov. 11, 1717; John, son of Thomas and Sarah his wife, born March 24, 1721; died April 17, 1721-2.

EBENEZER BUCK; born Nov. 11, 1717, son of Thomas and Sarah (Judd) Buck, married Deborah Harris, of Lebanon, Nov. 16, 1743. Deborah, daughter of Ebenezer and Deborah (Harris) Buck, born Oct. 18, 1744.

We find in the Middletown records that John Kirby, formerly of Middletown, Ct., in his deed gave to his daughter, Mary Buck, wife of Enoch Buck, of Weathersfield, deceased, sundry pieces of land ; one hundred and thirty acres on the east side of the river, one-half to her son, Thomas Buck, the other to her four daughters : Sarah, wife of Benjamin Churchill ; Hannah, wife of John Fowler ; Elizabeth, now wife of Caleb Dudley ; Abigail, now wife of Samuel Arnold.

In an historical sermon preached by Rev John Bayne, pastor Congregational Church, Portland, July 9, 1876, it is stated that prior to 1700 there were but three houses in that part of Middletown lying on the east side of the river, now Portland. In 1710, nine other families joined them, and one was Thomas Buck. The Honorable Assembly, held at Hartford, May 13, 1714, granted the inhabitants in Middletown on the east side of the great river, liberty to be a society of themselves. Oct. 25, 1721, Daniel Newell was ordained pastor. Aug. 8, 1722, Noadiah Russell, Thomas Buck, Richard Gill, chosen committee of trust. March 20, 1722, Wm. Cornwall, Sr., and Jonathan Judd, tithing men. Daniel Newell was a native of Bristol, graduated at Yale, 1718 ; died 1731, aged 31. Jan. 12, 1712, it was voted to have a school at or near the house of Thomas Buck. March 8, 1736, James Buck, committee to order prudentials. Thomas Buck, fence viewer.

In looking at the book of records we find some leaves are missing and others poorly kept so that we have to pass over some names and dates.

Thomas Buck must have been quite a landholder ; I find on the Middletown records, Joshua Gill deeded to Thomas Buck, Jan. 1707 ; John Sage to Thomas Buck, on the east side of the river, July, 1704 ; Nathan Andrews to Thomas Buck, Oct. 30, 1703. Thomas Buck sold to John Sage, July 5, 1705; Thomas Buck to Jonathan Judd, 1700; David Buck, of Weathersfield, to Giles Hall, June 15, 1734; Thomas Buck and Ann Buck, witnesses. There are 27 deeds given by Thomas Buck.

We have tried to find who was the father of Samuel Buck, who was born about 1730-5, and who married Hannah Wright for his second wife. Hannah was born 1737. We are of the opinion that Thomas and Sarah (Judd) Buck, must be their grandparents.

ISAAC BUCK, a brother of Samuel, from Portland, was taken prisoner and died on board the prison ship Old Jersey, at New York, 1777. Samuel Buck, born about 1730, went to Vermont on business, and died very suddenly, supposed near White River Junction, about 1785 or '90. He married and had two children: Amos and Anna; Anna married — Belden, in Rocky Hill; they had no issue. Samuel Buck married for his second wife Hannah Wright, born 1737, died 1831, aged 94. She died with her son James in Portland. Samuel and Hannah (Wright) Buck had 13 children. We find by the church records that Peltiah was baptized April 3, 1763; Jeremiah, baptized March 20, 1764; Hannah, baptized Aug. 30, 1767, married David Brewer, and moved to Tunbridge, Vermont; Isaac, baptized Mar. 3, 1772; James, baptized Mar. 27, 1774; Polly, baptized Mar. 17, 1778, married Joel Ranney, and moved to Ohio. Samuel died young. Samuel, second, baptized May 3, 1779; Justus and Esther, twins, baptized Sept. 3, 1789. Justus died in Buffalo, New York, Esther married Ezekiel Goodrich; Betsey married Reuben Loveland; Rose and Sally have no record of marriage.

JEREMIAH BUCK, son of Samuel and Hannah (Wright) Buck, born in Portland, 1764; he died Sept. 8, 1834, aged

70. He married Polly Butler, born 1765; she died Sept. 3, 1813, aged 48. He was a house and ship joiner by trade. His house was on the east side of the meadows, on the hill; he did but very little farming, most of the time he worked at his trade. He moved to Stockbridge, Mass., about 1800, where he bought a farm about four miles north of the town, and four miles south of the town of Lenox, where he lived and died. The land there lies upon a bed of marble which is worked to a large extent about two miles east in the town of Lee. They had seven children, four born in Portland, three in Stockbridge. He is pleasantly situated on the main road to Great Barrington, and a few miles north of the noted Hopkins estate. The family of Anson Buck is one of the old settlers, as they settled there about one hundred years ago. (Leffinwell) Buck, born May 3, 1848; married — Parker and lives about one mile south of the center of the town on the road to Great Barrington, at the fork of the road opposite where stood the great willow tree. It is said this tree grew from a riding stick which a Mr. — Goodrich, from Weathersfield, Ct., stuck in the earth in the year 1794. Before it was blown down it measured 32 feet around and the branches spread 115 feet. A part of his land is well adapted for corn and a part for grass. He has no children.

He has one hundred acres of land and as good as there is in the town. It lies a little rising from the village, and has a very commanding view, and lies on a bed of marble, and as the marble lies in one solid mass there are no seams and no running water, consequently they have to bring their water from one of the hills. They have bored 125 feet, and at that depth did not get through the marble, so they got no water.

Florilla, died in Hartford and buried in Portland in 1836-7; Harriet, moved to Lawrence, Mass.; Isaac, son of Isaac, married and died in East Randolph, Vt. He had one son, George, and two daughters—Lary and Cornelia.

JAMES BUCK, son of Samuel and Hannah (Wright) Buck, born in Portland, 1774; died Jan. 8, 1838; aged 63. His father died leaving a large family of children. He was put out, until he was sixteen, with farmer Enoch Sage, who owned one of the largest farms in the town, lying on the east side of the meadows, the house standing opposite what is known as the large elm tree. One time farmer Sage let him go with him to the town meeting; when he came home he asked him if he saw anything that was not right (they did not check their names then as they do now), he said Mr. — went around twice. When he was about sixteen he was thinking of learning the carpenter's trade: about this time he spent some evenings in his brother's shop. One morning farmer Sage found a hand-sled at the door. He saw it was not very strong so he put a back log on it to draw it into the house and it broke down; when he got the fire well going, he went to the chamber door and called Jim to get up and when he heard him coming he put the sled on the fire. When he saw it on the fire he looked very sorry. Farmer Sage asked him if he made it, he said he did; farmer Sage told him he was not fit to learn a trade if he could not make a sled that would hold a back log. Farmer Sage told him to take time and see if he could make a sled that would hold a back log. A few days after he brought one home. Farmer Sage said that would do; he could go and learn the trade. He lived when there was a direct tax for the support of the preaching of the gospel and now they pay by law indirectly for the support of the gospel. A part of the so-called Blue Laws have been repealed and a part remain. James Buck was one who did not believe it was right to be obliged to support a religion that he did not believe in, and he with several others had their cows attached and sold at the whipping post to pay for the support of the gospel. He was a man very conscientious in doing what he thought to be right; a trait that has come down to his children. He learned the trade of house and ship joiner with his brother Jeremiah (who afterwards moved to Stockbridge, Mass.); he married Ruth Matson, daughter of Thomas and Mary (Goodrich, born Nov. 18, 1745; married Jan. 14, 1767.) Matson, of Glastonbury, Dec. 24, 1795; she was born Feb. 2, 1776, died Aug. 12, 1857; age 81. James Buck, born 1774, died Jan. 8, 1838; age 63. He settled in the north-east part of the town; it was heavily wooded at that time. He built a saw mill and carried on a lumber business, there being a good deal of chestnut timber. He furnished a good many house and barn frames in the city of Middletown. He sawed a good deal of ship timber and ship plank, as at that time there was one Charles Churchill who built a number of vessels on the river two miles west. He built a blacksmith shop and carriage shop; he and his oldest son, Erastus, were the first builders of carriages in the town; he invented several patents; one for shelling corn, one for working butter, one for washing, one for cutting feed for cattle, a gouge for turning wood. This was when he had to take his horse and travel to Washington. We find that this family of Bucks were mostly mechanics. Children of James and Ruth (Matson) Buck:

B. Buck, and then followed farming and saw-milling. He was a natural born mechanic, and had a great many original ideas. He was one that could not understand why it took three to make one or one to make three; he was of the opinion that all things are governed by natural law and that man could not change it, and that such a thing as a miracle never existed, and that it was folly to pray to an unknown God. He was one that believed in free thought that bids us enter, explore, investigate, and when we dig out a fact it quietly whispers to our intelligence, Stand by that fact. Their children:

HORACE B. BUCK, son of James and Ruth (Matson) Buck, born in Portland, Ct., Oct. 15, 1822. His father died when he was fifteen and he was left to care for himself. After staying with his sister Fanny until the Spring of 1839, he went to South Glastonbury to learn the carriage trade of his brother James, where he remained two years, and then with his brother removed to Portland. Feb. 15, 1844, he bought out the business. March 2, 1845, he married Eliza A. Hall, daughter of Abner and Eliza (Butler) Hall, who was born in Portland, Nov. 21, 1823. They went to house-keeping in a place they call Buck Hollow. Dec. 3 they moved to a place he bought of R. U. Richmond, which is on the same stream of water about one mile west, where he carried on a large and extensive business, and his was the only carriage shop in the town. He also had a large iron foundry and manufactured plows quite extensively, and made a success in the business, and in April, 1860, when his two boys died with the scarlet fever, and he came very near dying with the same disease, he sold out his business. December 10 he moved into Mrs. McCleves house. in Pecowset, and bought out the grocery store of Capt. John McCleve. In 1861, he moved to the centre of the town into the old Post Office building, where he had quite a large grocery trade, and when the war broke out and there was a call for three hundred thousand men. there was a man by the name of Smith that offered to go for him and he paid three hundred and twenty-five dollars and was the first man sent from the town. After making a success in the grocery trade, and having several thousand dollars trusted out, he sold his business to Dr. T. E. Buck, in 1866. November, 1867, he went to Worcester, Mass., as agent of a co-operative store. Afterward, in 1876, he built a carriage shop at 68 Chandler Street, where he did a successful business. He retired from business in 1883, making his shop into four tenements, with others making eighteen. He has built a house at 98 Chandler Street, where he expects to spend his remaining days. It is on one of the principal streets of the city. The street is well paved with granite, and only three minutes walk from the new Post Office, which is one of the handsomest in the State. The electric cars pass eight times an hour. There are five churches within two minutes' walk. Children of H. B. and Eliza A. Buck :

The land on which the house stands is a part of that given to the city by the late George Jaques, which was worth to the city about two hundred thousand dollars. His lot contains 4,339 feet ; bought Aug. 20, 1886, at forty cents per foot. He was told when a young man, by a man of close observation, to always remember that sincerity was no test of truth.

Having started in the world with no one to help me, and having had a little experience in the world, I would say to my young friends,—be honest, be faithful in whatever you undertake. Never be called upon three times for a bill due ; never contract a debt with no means of paying it. If you want a little credit of the butcher, grocer, or to hire a tenement, or borrow a little money, do not be hanging around the beer saloon or go with a cigarette or cigar in your mouth, or go to the theatre more than three times a week, or hire a horse to ride out on Sunday more than four times a month. A word to the older ones. If the grocer, butcher, landlord or money lender should not receive his pay the day it is due, and hears the sound of the hammer or the handsaw from seven in the morning until six at night, wait on him a little longer. If you find he is hanging around the rum shop, call in your money, tell him some one wants the tenement, and trust him no more.

SKETCH OF THE FAMILY OF THOMAS MATSON, JR.

I find in the Glastonbury two hundred years' centennial discourse, by Alonzo B. Chapin, that Thomas Matson came from Middletown, Ct., and settled in the south-east part of Glastonbury about 1732; his ancestors came from Ireland. He married Rachel, daughter of Ebenezer Fox, and had eight children. Amos was enrolled in the militia, 1777; Amos, Jr., 1779; Thomas, Jr., 1779. In 1759 it was voted to have a school near the house of Thomas Matson. In an old will we find that Thomas Matson, "give and bequeath to my beloved wife, Hannah." (I think must be his second wife.) And the will says there were eight children: three sons—Amos, Thomas, Jr., and Joseph; and five daughters—Rachel and Abby, unmarried; Mabel, born 1739; married Nathaniel Hollister, Oct. 29, 1754; died Sept. 26, 1824, aged 35; Hannah, married — Bidwell; Ruth, married — Pattison. In 1767 the town voted to grant Thomas Matson, Jr., to build a saw mill near his house, provided it did not obstruct the highway. This was near the mouth of Roaring Brook. Thomas Matson was in the lumber business, and went up the river and bought logs and rafted them down the river to a place they called log landing. He sold out, about 1801, and moved to Owego, N. Y., with his three sons and three daughters.

THOMAS MATSON, JR., son of Thomas and Rachel (Fox) Matson, born in Glastonbury, Ct., married, Jan. 14, 1767, Mary Goodrich, who was born Nov. 18, 1745. She was daughter of William and Rachel (Savage) Goodrich. Their children :

GIRARD, ERIE CO., PA., Aug. 7, '94.

Dear Cousin Kate:

I received yours this A. M. and now, this P. M., am trying to answer it the best I can. I suppose you know as much about the first wife and family of grandfather Matson as I do, and perhaps more. It seems there were a number of children: George, Reuben, William, the boys; Rachel, Ruth, Mary, Amelia, the girls; I do not know how their ages come in, and then their mother died and then grandfather Matson married Mrs. Mary Pratt. Her mother was a Kilborn. They had two children, Nancy (my mother) and Fanny. Nancy was born June 9, 1791, and Fanny was three years younger. Their mother died when Fanny was born. After that grandfather married a widow Collins, she brought her daughter Lois into the family, who afterwards married Reuben Matson. My mother was born in Glastonbury, Ct. I suppose that is where they moved from to Owego when my mother was ten years old, which would be in 1801. My mother had an uncle Elizur Tryon who was very wealthy ; he was a vessel builder and had ships at sea. His wife was grandmother's sister. They wanted grandfather Matson to leave the little girls with them ; they would take care of them and school them ; but grandfather would not leave them ; they thought it was too bad to take them to a new wild country. They moved in wagons covered over, and took their provisions with them, and when they run short would stop at some farm house and bake a new supply. In one place they were asked where they were going ; when told to Owego, they said they were going right into hell. The two oldest brothers, George and Reuben, were married before they moved to Owego. They bought a farm in company and settled down in old log houses and all worked together and each had a share. They built a grist and saw-mill and built or bought a clothing mill, with a carding machine, the first in the country up to that time. The women had to card the wool into rolls and do their spinning and weaving for all the family use ; they had to prepare flax for summer clothing and for sheets and pillow slips. The first two mills were on Owego Creek, a short distance from the Susquehanna River ; the last named was about one mile up the creek. The grist mill was the only one in a large region of country ; people came from what was then called Genesee country ; it was a two or three days' journey. They took four horses and a very large wagon, called Pennsylvania wagons, nearly as large as a scow boat, and brought grists for themselves and neighbors. They always stayed until their load was ground ; often two days. Their school was kept in an old log house, which was not very well lighted, the windows were very small and greased paper, used for light. My mother was sent to school long enough to learn to read and write and that had to finish up her education. Her sister Fanny was said to be a very beautiful singer ; she caught cold which run her into the consumption ; the Dr. gave her calomel which caused her joints to come apart ; she was a great sufferer and passed away at the age of 18 years. The two brothers had large families. Grandfather and mother lived with Reuben, and my mother did a large share of the work when she was at home. They done a good deal of business with the saw mill every spring and sometimes in the summer ; they made rafts and floated them down to Baltimore, sold their lumber and then had to walk home over the mountains. The mountains were a place of resort for thieves and murderers. Once, while crossing the mountains, they heard wolves howling at a distance ; they hurried along as fast as they could and soon they heard them again nearer, and so for a number of times ; they made out to reach the river and swam across it and when they reached the opposite shore the wolves were just across the river where they started from ; as the wolves are no swimmers they were out of danger. Once they stopped at a log cabin to stay over night and had to climb up a ladder to get into the chamber ; one of them could not sleep ; there were men talking down stairs ; one man put his head above the floor two or three times to see if they were asleep, the wakeful one raised his head to let him know he was awake. Once he heard a woman say : " O don't, for God's sake, don't ! " About midnight it was still down stairs, so they got up and slipped down the ladder as noiselessly as they could and left the place ; after they had started, they saw the men back a piece from the house, digging a grave ; they expected they were digging it to put them into it.

Sometimes when their wives wanted something extra nice to wear, they bought the goods in Baltimore ; what one had the other had to have for the lumber was company stock. They had each of them a very beautiful satin cloak trimmed with very rich lace, and once George saw a very beautiful pink and white damask silk shawl and bought it on the sly ; when he got home they both wanted the shawl ; one had just as good a right to it as the other had ; they could not agree about it, so they gave it to my mother. This was all before your father was married. I do not know when or where Aunt Amelia or Milly as she was called was married ; whether in Ct. or Owego. She was courted by a very nice young man and expected to have him, and some one was mean enough to tell her that her lover would drink and get drunk, and gave him a terrible setting out. She felt just used up over it, and thought if he was so mean she did not want him and dismissed him. She found out when it was too late, that her lover had been lied about, and he was just the nice man she had supposed him to be, and he felt very bad to be thus dropped by her. (How very mean such liars and mischief makers are to fairly wreck the lives of two devoted ones.) She said she would marry the first one that came along. Elizur Risley happened to be the one; he was peddling iron ware and happened to see her and took a liking to her; she had a refined way with her, but there was not much of it about him. She always seemed to have a sad look. He took her to her future home in Madison town and Co., N. Y.; the country was new and she had to endure many hardships, never making any complaints. They had a number of children: Louisa, Sherman, Fanny, Amelia, Ruby, Allen, Clarinda, Harriet, Laura, and Charles. Louisa married her cousin, Elizur Risley, lived and died in or near Madison; Amelia married Welcome Chapman; they finally went to Utah, where she died; Ruby married — Tallcot; Harriet married — Troop; the last two went to Michigan and died there. Clarinda married — Abbert, they lived and died in Madison. Allen married, lived and died in Brookfield; Sherman, Fanny and Laura never married, and died on the old homestead. Charles married and is now living in Hamilton Village, Madison Co., N. Y.

Aunt Amelia had to make cloth for both summer and winter wear; for summer she made copperas color and blue linen and check, and when the children were half grown, about this time, the cotton factory was started in New Hartford; they could spin the yarn, but had not the machinery for weaving, and so put the weaving out, and would give half of the cloth to pay for the weaving, or would give half of the yarn. Aunt and Uncle Risley went to Owego after my mother to go up there to take in weaving, they thought it would be quite a help to both of them. Mother went and they divided the yarn some of the time and sometimes divided the cloth, they colored the yarn and made it into plaid for dresses, so aunt had herself and the girls nicely clothed, and it was much better than to have to spin the linen. My mother stayed there about one year, then went back to her father, in Owego. Soon after that her father had a paralytic stroke which was the cause of his death. William, I think, was married not far from this time to Miss Temperance Taylor. As I have no Matson family record, except my mother's birth, I cannot put in many exact dates, but will tell by circumstances. After her father's death she became acquainted with and married Luman Brown, Sept. 4, 1818; they lived near the village about one and one-half years, where I was born June 19, 1819; then they moved to Augusta, Oneida Co., N. Y., where he worked at his trade, cabinet work, and in the latter part of the winter making spinning wheels. Every woman spun yarn (that was not street yarn) in those days. They had four girls: Frances Mary (myself), Emeline Susan, Phebe Louisa, and Eliza Ann. We lived in Augusta until 1838, the year before father got the western fever; he started about the first of May, and thought of going to Chicago; he went in the first boat that started out of Buffalo, the lake was pretty full of ice, and he took a very bad cold. He intended to stop at Conneaut and see the friends and then go through to Chicago, as it was said work was plenty there and good wages. Cabinet work did not bring as good pay as joiner or house building, so for a few years he had worked at house building in the summer time. Uncle Reuben Matson was going to have a house built in the village and persuaded him to stay and build it, so he never went to Chicago, he went home late in the fall. In the winter David Matson wrote that Conneaut was booming, and made out that business was great, and thought that father had better come here in the spring; father had not got over the Chicago fever, but he gave in, thinking if there was as much being done as David said, perhaps he would do as well there as in Chicago. After we landed in Conneaut, and were going up to your father's, and saw everything looking as it did in the fall, when he left there, he felt very much disappointed, for there was nothing going on there. He hardly knew what to do; but he was there, and finally he bought a frame and your father let him have a small lot to put a house on, and we lived in your old house while he was getting that ready to go into. If it had not been for David's letter, very likely we should have gone to Chicago. I think, now, that would have been the best place for us ; but it was not so to be. I went to learn a trade of Laura and worked for her three summers at millinery work, after that worked on my own hook. My sisters learned to braid palm leaf hats, which had a ready sale, and after a while learned to make cigars. Mother had a new rag carpet woven in regular stripes, so they would match when sewed together ; that set every one in a rage to have her weave them a carpet, and to have the stripes to match, and that made plenty of business for her. Sister Phoebe was married Jan. 4, 1844, to Silas Green, a farmer ; Sister Emeline had the consumption and died Oct. 6, 1847 ; Eliza was married Dec. 10, 1850, to Cyrus Reid, a painter by trade ; they now live in Michigan, on a small farm ; I was quite an old maid, lived at home most of the time, except one summer, I became acquainted with a wealthy Southern lady that wanted me to go to her home in Louisville, Ky. She would and did pay my fare there and back again, and in 1861 I married Mr. Morris Hurd, a farmer, and lived in Springfield, Erie Co., Pa., until he died, August 16, 1887. He liked to travel and visit some ; we went to the Centennial in 1876, and to Washington, to Brooklyn, to Madison, then home, in that trip. I think I have been in Hamilton, Canada, five or six times. We made one trip to Rochester, Minn., and to Excelsior, around Lake Minnetonka, to Minneapolis, back to Rochester, to Grand Blanc, Mich., then home, and many other trips I have taken, so I have not always stayed at home. Sister Phoebe died with a cancer Jan. 8, 1889, and now I am living in Girard, Erie Co., Pa., taking all the comfort I can in my old age, all alone.

FRANCES MARY HURD.

I have not found any record of the family of Amos Matson.

The family of Joseph Matson are still living in and around Glastonbury, Ct.
